

TO FACE FARMERS

Secretary Wallace Finds Railroads Injured by Own Charges.

PREDICTS CONFUSION
Daniel Willard Defends Confiscatory Power of Act of 1920.

FAVORS FIVE YEAR TRIAL

Walker D. Hines Indorses His Views at Meeting Here of Political Scientists.

Freight rates must come down unless there is to follow an immediate and "profound readjustment" of agricultural production. The transportation act of 1920 should not be tampered with or amended at this time but have at least five years in which to prove its value.

These were the outstanding opinions expressed on the Academy of Political Science at its semi-annual meeting at the Hotel Astor yesterday. The first was voiced by Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, and the second by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.
The general topic was "Railroads and Business Prosperity." Walker D. Hines, former Director-General of Railroads, indorses Mr. Willard's plea for a thorough trial of the transportation act before amending or modifying its provisions.

About 600 men and women members and guests of the Academy heard the first principal address at luncheon hour. Various other phases of the general topic were treated in discussions through the day.

Debate on Confiscation.

The provisions of the transportation act of 1920, establishing a statutory rule of rate making for the Interstate Commerce Commission and setting up the principle of confiscation by the Government of earnings in excess of 6 per cent. of the net operating income, were the chief subjects considered. The arguments revolved around what had been accomplished since the railroads were returned to private control and what progress has been made toward their rehabilitation; whether the industry is drifting toward Government ownership and what the labor provisions of the law have developed.

The most hopeful sign of the present time is the apparent recognition of the railroad management that our present high rates cannot be continued without disaster to the railroads themselves and that rates must come down to a point not far, if any, above the pre-war levels, asserted Secretary Wallace, whose remarks were said to prophesy an early reduction of rates by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The probable effect of maintaining present rates in the long run, Secretary Wallace said, would be:

- To favor the farmers of South America and Australia at the expense of American farmers, the more so because of the substantial decrease in ocean rates.
- To keep prices on farm products in the large surplus producing States at figures lower than are justified by the investment in land and equipment and cost of production.
- To prolong the period of dissatisfaction among farmers and encourage advocates of economic fallacies of all sorts.
- To shift industrial enterprises gradually westward, nearer the surplus producing States.
- To promote sectional rather than national spirit and make more difficult large national policies with respect to international affairs.

Mr. Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio said he did not believe it possible for private ownership of the railroads to endure unless the confiscatory feature of the transportation act were allowed to remain.

Roads Entitled to Enlarge.

He said he believed the act had provided for the effective rehabilitation of the railroad facilities in time of emergency and added:

"It is manifestly important that there should be regularity and continuity of service by the railroads, and one of the important problems before Congress was to insure, if possible, such continuity by providing adequate compensation of service which might be caused by misunderstandings and disputes arising between the railroad managers and their employees."

"It was urged by some that the provision of the act should be so written as to prohibit strikes on the railroads. Personally I do not think that we can feel confident that such a law would or could be effectively enforced. The matter was, therefore, dealt with, I think in the wisest way possible under the circumstances."

"I believe that the Transportation Act of 1920 affords a workable basis for future successful operation of the railroads in the United States, in harmony with our long established policy of private ownership and operation."

PUBLISHERS RECORD SQUARE DEAL VIEWS

OPEN SHOP NO THREAT

Electing Patterson President and Indorsing 1926 Exhibit Convention Is Closed.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association reaffirmed yesterday its stand for "a square deal for all" in the business offices of newspapers and brought its annual convention, in session for the last week at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, to an end. Several resolutions were adopted setting forth views on fair dealing.

After electing officers the convention adjourned and the new board of directors at its first meeting decided to continue the special committee as advisory on labor affairs, with H. N. Kellogg as chairman. It was also decided to have a special committee on the open shop in newspaper plants to cooperate with the new division on the open shop established by the association. This action for the encouragement of the open shop was stated to be in no way a threat against unions. Members of the new committee are D. D. Moore of New Orleans, Harry Chandler of Los Angeles and W. A. Elliott of Jacksonville.

Paul Patterson of the Baltimore Sun was elected president of the association. The new board of directors, Patterson, Chandler, Elliott, Howard Davis, New York Tribune, treasurer, the directors elected are F. G. Bell, Savannah News; Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times; and Charles H. Taylor, Boston Globe. Other members of the board are E. E. Atkinson, Toronto Star; E. H. Baker, Cleveland Plain Dealer; E. B. H. Hines, Indianapolis News.

Against Split Commissions.

The publishers adopted a resolution condemning a practice of splitting commissions between advertisers and agents as destructive to the best interest of the advertiser, publisher and agent. Another resolution approved and indorses the present system of compensation of advertising agencies, which was stated to be the commission system.

Another resolution approved and indorses the practice of giving guaranties to advertisers of a stipulated amount of circulation. The practice has led to abuses, the resolution states, and the publisher and advertiser to the disadvantage of fair-minded dealers, and it was resolved "that any form of guaranty that does not insure the full and complete circulation of the advertiser's advertising should be rejected."

The erection of a special building to house the resolution of the Exhibition Association's exhibit in 1926, to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, was approved and indorses the progress of the project for the past 150 years was favored by the association. In a resolution indorsing the project, the association stated:

"It is the sense of the American Newspaper Publishers Association that such an exhibit would be instructive and helpful for emphasizing the importance of the position and work of the newspaper in modern life and should be encouraged by the cordial cooperation of this organization and its members."

Incinerator Report.

D. D. Moore of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, chairman of the new committee on open shop, gave the following statement, approved by the board of directors:

"Articles published in New York newspapers to-day telling of the establishment of an open shop department of the A. N. P. A. contained several inaccurate statements. This convention respectfully requests the newspapers to make necessary corrections."

"The statements complained of as inaccurate were: 'The resolution establishing the open shop division was introduced by Earl J. McCone of the Buffalo Commercial, secretary of the Open Shop Association of American Newspaper Publishers. Mr. McCone said his organization had thirty-five members, and he came to the convention this year with a backing of 206 members. While he was presenting the resolution he got into a dispute with William B. Rogers, representing the Boston Transcript; Charles E. Jarvis, Christian Science Monitor; Joseph J. McGinley, Norristown Eagle; and Leon Shaw, Billings (Mont.) Gazette.'"

"The resolution was passed almost unanimously, the only opposition coming from a few members who feared that it might be taken as a challenge by the union. Mr. McCone said it was not intended to do so. His stand, he said, was backed by Major Stahman of the Nashville Banner and by Frank B. Noyes of the Washington Star."

"The resolution was not introduced by Mr. McCone, nor was Mr. McCone's position indorsed by Major Stahman and Mr. Noyes. The statement that the four newspapers joined the open shop association, while Mr. McCone was presenting the resolution was incorrect. Mr. Rogers of Boston especially objected to the use of his name in this connection."

"Neither did Mr. McCone of the open shop Publishers' Association have anything to do with the resolution. It was also decided to have a special committee on the open shop in newspaper plants to cooperate with the new division on the open shop established by the association. This action for the encouragement of the open shop was stated to be in no way a threat against unions. Members of the new committee are D. D. BLUE SKY BILL PASSES HOUSE AT WASHINGTON

Hits Fake Promoters as Well as Bucketshop Firms.

Special Dispatch to This New York Herald

Washington, D. C., April 28. (AP.)—Without a new call the House today passed the Denison "blue sky" bill, designed to drive bucketshop operators out of business. The measure was adopted as reported by the Interstate Commerce Commission without material changes.

The bill was brought forward in the House after THE NEW YORK HERALD's recent exposure of the extensive bucketshop operations in the metropolis.

The proposed law will not be effective in states that have no "blue sky" laws. It is aimed at promoters of fake stock companies who cannot be reached by state authorities because of their operations through the mails.

The Treasury recently estimated that in a few months these "business pirates" induced the people of more than $400,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds in exchange for worthless securities.

In defending his bill Representative Denison (Ill.) said those charged with the administration of State laws had found there were gangs who preyed upon the public by the sale of worthless securities. If an oil well was discovered, the bill would prevent the promoters of such a scheme from flooding the mails with literature promising fabulous wealth.

For the legislation, he said, had become necessary.

"The gangs are taking hundreds of millions of dollars each year," he said, "and the people of moderate means, but they do not disturb the banks or the business men."

"ALICE IN HUNGERLAND" TO GET GUARDIAN SOON

Arguments Heard in Case Over Jewish Upbringing.

Efforts to determine who shall be the proper custodian of little twelve-year-old Esther Rason, the "Alice in Hungerland" girl, who was the subject of a motion picture of that name, will be resumed next Thursday before Supreme Court Justice Cohan. This was decided by the display of everything shown in the picture to the jury of the past 150 years was favored by the association. In a resolution indorsing the project, the association stated:

TOPICS TO MARK DAY IN CITY'S CHURCHES

Metropolitan Temple, Where Grant Worshipped, to Observe His Centennial.

MISS ROYDEN TO PREACH

English Woman to Be at Park Ave. Baptist, St. George's and Divine Paternity.

One of the most notable church services to-morrow will be in the nature of a memorial to commemorate the centenary of Ulysses S. Grant at the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh avenue and Fourteenth street, at 7:45 P. M. This is the church where Gen. Grant and his family worshipped when they were in New York. On the pew used by the family there is a memorial tablet and in the Grant memorial window in the church are the immortal words of Grant: "Let us have peace."

Princess Cantacuzene, Gen. Grant's granddaughter, will be present and will be one of the speakers. Bishop Luther B. Wilson will pay a tribute to the character and life work of Grant. A number of civil war veterans will attend the service and there will be a brief reception later.

Miss Maude Royden, English preacher who has been attending the seventh annual convention of the Young Women's Christian Association in Hot Springs, Ark., will speak to-morrow at the morning service of the Park Avenue Baptist Church. She is also to speak at the 4 o'clock service of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, at 123rd street and Lexington avenue, at 10 o'clock, and at the 10 o'clock service of the Church of the Divine Paternity, Sixty-sixth street and Central Park West.

Miss Royden was pupil assistant to Dr. Joseph Fort Newell, of the Divine Paternity at the City Temple, London, from September, 1917, to November, 1919. Miss Royden, though well known in England, is not known in this country. She has been a preacher in the City Temple. It was the first time a woman had ever been called to the pulpit of a great church.

The first of a series of sermons on spiritualism will be preached to-morrow at 11 o'clock by the Rev. Edward H. Emmet, at the Manhattan Congregational Church, Broadway at Seventy-sixth street. Mr. Emmet has had some dealings with mediums, one in particular being a London medium highly recommended by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
